The tables were prettily decorated with flowers and lit tapers. A very tasty meal was served by the ladies of the church.

At the close of the banquet, a program was presented with Attorney Albert Krusemark, Jr., of Frankfort and a member of the Lions Club in charge as master of ceremonies.

Angelo Frascarello of the music department of the Bloom Township High School of Chicago Heights, played several violin selections, accompanied by Miss Lillian Collins at the piano. He showed exceptional talent and his offerings were given a big hand. He made a very good impression.

The speaker of the evening was Rev. W. B. Morgan, pastor of the Ottawa Street Methodist church of Joliet. He delivered a talk, packed with truths bearing on present day conditions the world over. The keynote of his talk, was that, back bone and standing by ones convictions, is very essential in order to bring about better world conditions.

At the close of the festivities, a party was held in the home of Attorney Herbert Polkers who is a candidate for probate judge at which a number of the county candidates were guests.

THEY LOVE THEIR CONDUCTOR

The Mokena students who attend the high schools in Joliet and who ride the Rock Island trains daily, surprised their conductor Mr. Rufus Pickett Wednesday when they climbed on the home-bound train, and cornered him in their coach and presented him with a dandy stream-lined Parker pen set Billy Steen of Mokena making the presentation.

For 27 years Mr. Pickett who gives his age as 51, has served as brakeman and collector on the Joliet-Chicago route. Each year a new group of boys and girls from this territory join his train as student travelers. He estimates that he has made friends with about 3,000 children, many of them who are parents of the teenagers who now ride his train, No. 232. He knows all the 'kids' as he calls them by their first names and most of their last names also.

Mr. Pickett who is versatile in making friends has a 10 year old daughter. He also is quite an accomplished writer, his articles appearing under the pen name of 'Rufus Rambler', in the Rock Island Digest. We expect to run one of his articles, if not this week, then next.

It was a very commendable act for this group of travelling students to honor their caretaker on the train in such a way. Well kids are always likeable.

Blue Island Church Scene of Pretty Spring Wedding

Salem Lutheran church in Blue Island was the scene of a pretty wedding Saturday, March 9th at 3 p. m., with gladioli and jonquils on the altar and white satin bows tied on aisle seats when Lois Bernice Stelter on the arm of her father approached the altar to become the bride of Armand Cinabro, with Rev. O. Woelzlein of the Trinity Lutheran church of Tinley Park officiating in the absence of the pastor of Salem church, Rev. R. R. Reinke who was ill.

The bride was attired in silk lace and marquisette with train and a fingertip veil caught with orange blossoms and she carried a cascade of white gardenias, her favorite flower.

Gladys Friske as maid of honor wore peach taffeta, also a blue feather head dress with blusher to match. Betty Howell and Dolores Bruns of New Lenox, as bridesmaids wore blue lace and net with pink feather headresses and blushers to match. These young ladies carried mixed bouquets of pink carnations, blue iris and yellow acacia.

The two little flower girls were Karen Stelter and Sharon Schultz cousins of the bride; they looked adorable in aqua and peach marquisette with bandeaux to match and carried colonial bouquets of mixed flowers.

Best man was Henry Cinabro, brother of the groom. Ushers were Lyle and Walter Stelter, Jr., brothers of the bride. The groom and his attendants had white carnation boutonieres.

Renzo Morra, Roseland, sang "The Lord's Prayer" and "Because" accompanied by Henry Hoppe as organist.

The brides' mother wore a dusty rose crepe dress with a corsage of toliaman roses. The groom's mother wore black, her corsage was of white carnations. The bride's maternal grandmother, Mrs. George Schultz, wore aqua and her paternal grandmother, Mrs. Alfred Stelter, wore navy blue, both had corsages of pink carnations.

They were the recipients of many lovely gifts and a generous purse. The newlyweds will reside indefinitely at the home of the bride.

Orland Legion Speaker Warns Against Reds

About 300 guests attended the American Legion meeting and initiation of of new members held in the Orland Park school gym Tuesday night.

A colorful and inspiring program was presented with Marvin Schmadeke leading in the singing of, "The Star Spangled Banner."

Mayor W. R. Schussler of Orland Park was the Master of Ceremonies.

In the initiation ceremonies, 50 new members were initiated into the Orland Park Post No. 526, by the crack Naval Post No. 372, American Legion Ritual Team.

A big feature was a stirring address by former congressman Fred E. Busbey who is now again a candidate for nomination to this same office.

In his talk on Education and Rehailitation of ex-service men, Mr. Busbey stressed the urgent need of a close-up check on educators showing it is just as important to know the background and character of teachers in our schools as it is for one to be sure of a title to a piece of property or automobile. He showed that many instances have been uncovered where instructors have included communistic ideas in the minds of students.

Fred E. Busbey

Among those present was Dick Ruskey of Palos Park, candidate for state representative in the 3rd district on the Republican ticket.

At the close of the meeting, a large group of friends of Mr. Busbey, prevailed on him to come to Orland Park in the near future and deliver a talk straight from the shoulder without pulling any punches on deplorable conditions in government of which the public is not informed.

The initiation was a very auspicious occasion and an evening long to be remembered. In fact it was the biggest event in the history of the Orland Park Legion Post.

Dancing followed the program.

Leaps From Moving Car With Small Brother

While Darlene Wood, aged 10 years, and her little brother, were on their way home from the New Lenox public school, about 4 o'clock, last Friday afternoon, a car pulled up alongside them on Cedar road, and the driver asked where they lived and if they would like to ride home. They said they would and got in the car.

The children are staying with their grand parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Wood who reside north of New Lenox. When the car came to the lane leading to the grand parent's home, the driver failed to stop and when Darlene asked the driver to stop, he refused and kept driving on. When he made an indecent exposure, the little girl managed to get the car door open and leaped out dragging her little brother with her.

Darlene has been suffering with rheumatic fever and this scare caused her to suffer from shock. The case was reported to Will County Sheriff's office, but no trace was found of the car nor the man in question.

This case is parallel to the case of Carol Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Williams residing on a farm near Pilcher Park near Joliet, who was severely beaten on the head with a hammer and shot a number of times by a man later accused of attacking the girl who is 9 years old, after he picked her up on Maple Road as she was on her way home from school, Wednesday afternoon.

The man held, gave his name as James F. Lincoln Jr., 30, of 559 Clinton Place, River Forest, a salesman for the Lincoln Electric Co., 323 E. 23rd Street and son of a wealthy Cleveland industrialist. He is a married man and the father of two children.

THE COACHES KNOW BEST

It is hard to believe that any follower of basketball would be willing to leave the selection of the team to all the members of the student body. If the best possible team was desired, even the students themselves would much prefer to leave the selection of the squad to the coach. They would prefer this because they would know that the coach was in a better position to pick the players best fitted for the various positions on the team.

This principle of every branch of sport is the selection of the American Davis Cup team of the Olympic Games squad right down to "corner lot" baseball. It is successful American way of doing things—the method by which the people as a whole delegate authority to others who will represent them in making needed decisions.

In the field of politics, some such process is also both necessary and desirable. That is why the leaders of our political parties—from precinct committeemen to members of the national committees—are elected by the party rank and file, after which they are expected to accept and discharge full party responsibility.

In Will County the voters of the Republican party select by secret ballot the members of the county Republican organization, and in these party officials they place full responsibility for the success of their party. Realizing and accepting this responsibility, the Will County Republican officials have recommended certain candidates in the Republican party primary to be held April 9th. They have made these recommendations after much thought and after carefully weighing many factors.

It is believed that the rank and file of the Republican party will be glad of the opportunity to know how the Republican "coaches" feel about the relative merits of the primary candidates. It offers them one sure way to demonstrate their belief in the long-accepted American principle of "representative government."

HERBERT HOOVER HESITATED
WASHINGTON. —Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson had a hard time at first persuading Herbert Hoover to come to Washington for the food conference. Anderson caught the ex-President at Key West, Fla., where he was fishing.

"I've promised my family for seven years to take them fishing," Hoover told the secretary of agriculture, "and now at last here I am."

Anderson, however, emphasized the urgency of the food crisis.

"We need your experience and advice, Mr. President," he said. "You can go back to your fishing immediately afterward. But this is a time when your country needs you."

Hoover finally consented to come.

BRICKBATS WIN ELECTIONS

Two of the bitterest opponents on the house floor and in the interstate commerce committee are Representatives Clarence Brown, conservative Republican of Blanchester, Ohio, and Vito Marcantonio, American Laborite of New York City. Off the floor, however, the two respect each other's ability and get along well.

Sitting in the house lobby the other day they smilingly concluded an agreement which will probably never be carried out.

They were talking about campaign expenses, when Brown proposed: "Vito, I've got a suggestion. Why don't we both cut our campaign expenses to the bone? Here's how to do it:

"You go into my district and make three speeches against me. Call me a reactionary Hooverite, an isolationist, an economic royalist — and anything else you can think of. That'll elect me."

"Then I'll go into your district and make three speeches. I'll call you a Red, a Dago, a new dealer and an anti-Rankinite."

"With the proper literature about you in my district and the proper literature about me in your district, both of us are a cinch for re-election when we do that."

Marcantonio agreed that the idea had merit, and they shook hands on it.

NAZIS REMAIN IN GERMANY

A secret report on failure to de-Nazify Germany has been made to the war department, but is considered so shocking that it probably will be destroyed. It is now in the office of Brig. Gen. Frank A. Meade.

The report shows complete failure to clean out high-ranking Nazis. It also shows a surprising number of so-called German "laborers" who have secretaries and stenographers assigned to them.

This is one of the latest dodges to get around the employment of Nazis by the American army. According to army rules, no former Nazi can be employed in any job more important than that of a "laborer." Result is that many Nazis are used in important jobs, but listed on the books as "laborers." That is why they are assigned secretaries and stenographers.

These "common laborers" are then put in charge of important manufacturing plants. The report now in the hands of the war department was made by the public safety and inspection division of military government. It may never see the light of day.

HOW WYATT DID IT

If there were more men like Housing Expediter Wilson Wyatt around, President Truman would have easier sailing. The other day in Chicago, Wyatt was guest speaker at a banquet of the National Association of home builders, 3,200 strong, all hostile, all prepared to boo at the man who proposed revolutionary building reforms in order to complete 3,000,000 homes in two years.

As Wyatt arose, the atmosphere was charged with hostility. However, he told stories, explained his program, made no antagonistic statements.

"If you gentlemen are against this program, then you don't understand it," Wyatt said. "It's my fault for not making it clear."

After 45 minutes, having won over a considerable part of the audience, he stopped. Then for 45 minutes more he answered questions. Every inch of the way he fought for his program of low-cost housing for veterans.

Finally, when he finished, every builder in the huge dining room rose to his feet and cheered.

NOW WHITE SPAGHETTI

Some of the strongest opposition to the President's "dark bread" order is coming from an unexpected quarter — spaghetti manufacturers.

Spaghetti, macaroni and noodles are made from semolina, a gritty flour made, in turn, from durum wheat.

Semolina millers, as well as spaghetti makers, are up in arms about the "dark bread" order, declaring it will drive them out of business. A number of semolina mills have filed an exception.

A PEOPLE GAINS NATIONAL CONSCIOUSNESS

LESSON TEXT—I Samuel 7:1-8, 13-15.
MEMORY SELECTION—Obey my voice, and I will be your God, and ye shall be my people: and walk ye in all the ways that I have commanded you, that it may be well unto you.—Jeremiah 7:23.

The most powerful movement for national prosperity is a revival of spiritual Christian living.

Israel had come to the place where the people recognized that they were on the brink of national disaster.

One of the scriptures on revival is II Chronicles 7:14: "If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land."

This is the way of revival and prosperity for America, too.

Revival will come when God's people will

I. Seek God's Face (vv. 1, 2).

The ark had been out of its proper place for a long time. The ungodly Philistines had it, but they were glad to return it.

The calamities which befell them speak of distress in the heart of an unbeliever when the presence of God is evident.

For a time the ark was in the house of Abinadab, but even there it was not in its rightful place. Samuel moved among the people, pointing them back to God.

This was his first act of public ministry, but behind that public act is the history of a godly life. Such a man can consistently urge others to turn to God.

The response of the people was wholehearted. They were thoroughly sick of their sin and separation from God. The earnest of their sincerity was their obedience to the admonition of Samuel that they

II. Turn From Their Wicked Ways (vv. 3, 4).

Israel had learned from their heathen neighbors to worship their false gods. These they must put away if God was to bless them.

The same prerequisite to spiritual revival exists today. But some may say, We do not worship heathen gods. One is astonished at the similarity between the ritual of some cults and orders and the ancient religions of heathendom.

The fact is that we have set up many new gods—money, fashion, social position. The command needs to go out again through God's messengers. "Put away the foreign gods."

Now the time had come for God's servant to call the people to

III. Humble Themselves and Pray (vv. 5-8).

Spiritual life thrives on the gathering together of God's people. The crisis in Israel was met by a great convocation of the people. We need to revive the great soul-stirring religious gatherings of a generation ago.

We can get plenty of people together for a football game, but where are the people who should be in our churches?

"I will pray," said Samuel. He was a great intercessor (see I Sam. 15:11; Ps. 99:6; Jer. 15:1). Revival never comes without faithful intercession on the part of those whose hearts are really burdened.

Ask yourself, How much have I really prayed for revival in my church, my community, and my nation? If I should begin to pray in earnest, would not God hear me and answer?

IV. God Will Hear and Forgive (vv. 13-15).

Because his people had sought him in humility and repentance, God forgave and cleansed and gave them victory.

"Behold, the Lord's hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; neither his ear heavy, that it cannot hear" (Isa. 59:1, 2). God saved Israel out of the hands of their enemies. The Philistines, seeing them gathered together to pray, assumed that they were preparing to fight, and they attacked. In the previous battle at that very spot (I Sam. 4:1-10), Israel had fought with weapons of men and been disgracefully defeated. Now they fought with the weapon of prayer and faith in God, and great was the victory.

America is valiantly battling against the social and economic problems of these distressing post-war days, but one fears that all too often the weapons are those of the arm of flesh which will fail us. Let us look up instead of to one another. "God will save us" (v. 8).

There is an inspiring word of hope here for every troubled soul. You may, like Israel, have fallen into sin. Your life may be defeated. You may be utterly discouraged. Return to the Lord, put away sin, gather with God's people, pray, and God will give you victory, even at the very point of former defeat.

CREATES NEW SLOGAN FOR BARLEY GROWERS

In discussing the need for more malting barley at a recent meeting of University and State Department of Agriculture officials at Madison, Dr. John H. Parker, director of the Midwest Barley Improvement Association of Milwaukee, urged Wisconsin farmers to have pride in their performance as barley growers and used the figures cited below to prove that they would reap a profit by growing and marketing choice quality malting barley in 1946. "Pride and profit in performance" may thus become the slogan for Wisconsin barley growers in 1946.

The average farm price of barley in Wisconsin in 1945 was $1.19 per bushel, giving an average return of $47.60 per acre. This figure is more significant and full of meaning for farmers than either bushels per acre or pounds per acre, the measures of crop production commonly used.

Comparative figures for oats, a chief competing small grain crop, in 1945 were 51 bushels per acre, a bumper crop, and a farm price of 67¢ per bushel, giving a return of only $34.17 per acre, or $13.43 less per acre than for barley.

French Speed Up Rail Rebuilding

Tremendous Damage Being Repaired Rapidly.

PARIS.—Despite the tremendous damage suffered by France's railroads during the war, reconstruction has been proceeding rapidly.

Officials in charge of the program are pointing to 1946 as the year which should see a near-return to prewar normalcy.

Gains have been made despite the fact France has been suffering from the most acute shortage of coal in its history, besides a shortage of almost every kind of material needed in the reconstruction job.

In September, 1944, the railroads seemed almost beyond hope of repair. Not a single phase of the system had escaped damage.

Locomotives, freight and passenger cars, tracks, stations, freight yards, bridges, repair shops, sidings—all had been seriously damaged.

Out of a total of 17,000 locomotives which France had in 1939, 11,800 remained following the liberation.

Only 2,900 of these were usable. Today there are 12,800 engines in France, 8,100 of which are in running order.

Damaged locomotives are being repaired at the rate of 100 per month.

To rebuild further their depleted stock of engines the French have placed orders in America and Canada for 1,340 engines, with delivery expected during 1946.

Before the war there were approximately 460,000 freight cars. Only 230,000 remained following liberation. But today the French are repairing their damaged cars at the rate of 2,000 per month.

Stations are to be considerably enlarged, while repair shops will be strategically located throughout France and furnished with the latest equipment.

About 40 of the big rail yards were destroyed up to 80 per cent or more during the war. Today these yards are approximately 75 per cent repaired. Some of them are actually handling more cars today than they did in 1943.

Throughout their repair of all installations, especially destroyed stations, depots and repair shops, the French are modernizing.

More Pupils Than Text

Books Are Now Available

NEW YORK. — Schools and colleges will be short of textbooks at least until the end of 1946, book publishers predicted.

The unprecedented urge for education has swamped the textbook publishers, already running behind due to paper shortage and inadequate press facilities. They say the peak demand in September cannot be met.

G.I.s. are pouring into any college with room for them.

W.N.U. RELEASE

THE STORY THUS FAR: Teresa likes Stenhart much better than she likes Sherwin. She speaks again of Stenhart's dreams "like devils in him." When Stenhart is left alone in a chair under a live oak tree in the yard, the stranger confronted the sick man, who blurted out: "My God, Sherwin, you!" Sherwin (Hazzlett) calmly states: "I've come to kill you, but not just now; you're sick." Sherwin returned to the house, feeling there was plenty of time to kill Stenhart. He could wait. A breeze from the window uncovered a photograph on the desk. A picture of Jane. Unconsciously a change came over Sherwin, the blood rushed to his face, his eyes softened . . . as he thought of her.

CHAPTER IV

He held the picture in his hands, looking at it steadily. It had been taken perhaps four years before. The face was almost childish, but the clear straight look was there; a woman like that might keep a man from—crime! And Stenhart dared to be in love with her! Well, dared to be in love with her!

He had opened the dog-eared account books again. "I'll try to make good on these, anyway," he thought, and smiled for the first time as he began to run down Jim's slovenly figures. But he had hardly reached the foot of the column before he heard a quick step behind him and Jim himself came in, dusty and fagged.

"Hello, Hazlett. Quit that stuff, I've got something else on hand." As he spoke he flung himself into a chair and mopped his forehead. "Got most of the strays back, but I've lost about eighty yearlings, besides those you made into beef," he added with a grin.

"Sorry," Sherwin began, "but—" "No regrets!" Jim laughed. "You can ride, I know that. The men are all busy and I want you to ride over to Hemmings' place, it's about fifteen miles, and get the sheriff. He's over there now. Take him along with you and show him the place where Jordan ran past you—you know, on the highway. We think he's got some of his rustlers there. Anyway, he's cleared out of this neighborhood, and I want Cutler—that's the sheriff—to know it. You know the locality where Jordan dodged. Mac'll give you a fast horse. Better go right away."

Sherwin was staring fixedly at the books in front of him. He said nothing, and, after a moment, Jim looked around at him.

"Well?" he said interrogatively. "I don't know the roads; I'll lose time finding the place—Hemmings' I mean. Hadn't you better send some one who knows the way?"

"I've got no one who knows where you saw Jordan. Besides, the road to Hemmings' place is straight, you can't miss it. All the men are busy, and I'm used up. You can make it before Cutler takes a false trail. Here, I'll draw you a map—" Jim reached for a pencil. As he did so he caught a glimpse of the other man's face and whistled, then he laughed. "See here, Hazlett, what's wrong—you're not afraid to meet the sheriff, are you?" he asked lightly.

Sherwin's face whitened. He rose. "I'll go at once, sir," he said gravely; "where's the house?"

Jim struck his hand on the desk. "Here, I say, don't take it like that. I was joking!"

Sherwin met his eyes squarely. "It's the kind of joke I don't like," he replied coldly.

Something in the man's eyes made Jim lean back in his chair and observe him closely. But he turned the matter off as well as he could.

"Sorry! I owe you an apology. But you'll go?"

Sherwin nodded, went out and crossed the veranda to the lawn. Under the trees he saw a pretty tableau. Fanny Sewell was reading aloud to the convalescent, and going away from them, across the flower-dotted slope that led to the creek, was Jane. Sherwin saw the sunlight on her uncovered head. She did not see him, nor did Stenhart. He, too, was watching Jane. Sherwin's hand clenched at his side but he walked rapidly across the open space and went to the stables.

Old Mac was there with his arm in a sling, but he had already had his orders from Jim, and one of the stablemen had a fast horse saddled.

"Jim says you're to go after the sheriff. He thinks Jordan's made off—" the old man shrugged.

"I see you don't agree with that," said Sherwin, as he sprang into the saddle.

"A fox mostly doubles," Mac replied. "Look out for yourself, lad; Jordan may remember the rough an' tumble you had together."

"In case he does, goodbye, and thank you!" he said.

As he rode his mind worked quickly. Across the bridge he drew rein an instant, felt in his pocket and drew out a newspaper two days old. He read a paragraph and shook his head. It was too great a risk to ride to Hemmings' place—he must give up his vantage-ground, his chance to be near Stenhart. The way that Jim had sent him lay to the west. He did not take it, but turned east. The road here was skirted by the creek and, half a mile farther, it ascended and commanded a view of Las Palomas. Sherwin followed it. Here, at the very beginning, fate had forced his hand more neatly than even Stenhart could have done it. If he turned back and went to meet the sheriff—? There was a chance, one a million, that he could carry it off, but if he did not, then he lost all chance at Stenhart. But if he went on to the east—then he must lose his point of vantage and he would never see Jane Keller again!

What madness to think of the girl! Sherwin knew it, but he was young and her clear eyes held him. He heard still her voice when she told him to "make good!"

And he was going—like a craven! Suddenly he turned his horse's head. He would go back; he'd go west and face—the devil, if need be!

Something stirred in the brush below the road, and he saw the branch of a low hanging tree sway suddenly. Rising in his stirrups he looked through a gap in the foliage. Below him ran the creek. On the farther bank wild flowers bloomed bravely, the sunlight making a carnival of color. He caught a glimmer of white, looked again and saw a figure there. Jane! She must have come this far looking for flowers; he could see her bending down to pull the blossoms. He dropped from the saddle, led his horse into the shelter of some eucalyptus and left him. If there was any one on this side of the creek he must know it.

Low bushes grew thick along the bank and a flowering vine, sprawling over them, knotted them together. Sherwin could not see far into the dense green shadows, but he found an opening and slipped on among the spreading branches, dropped to the mossy ground and looked between close-set roots and stems toward the smooth glimmer that was the creek. It was still. There was no sound but Jane's voice; she was singing softly to herself. At first it seemed as if the swinging bough must have been a figment of imagination, but Sherwin knew better. There was no wind—who swung that bough? He waited, holding his breath, for suddenly it came to him that danger threatened Jane. Disarmed by Jim's fixed idea that Jordan had gone they had grown careless; no one was within call. The shadow in the brush was dark, but the sunlight on the water beyond cut clear outlines. Sherwin became aware of a stealthy sound close to the edge of the creek. He stooped lower and discerned a crouching figure; a man was crawling on his hands and knees toward the water. As he dropped lower to pass under a bough, his head was silhouetted against the light and Sherwin knew him—it was the rustler, Jordan! Instinctively, Sherwin's hand went to his revolver, then it dropped. He dared not shoot. The creek was narrow here and Jane was too near. A miss, and—! He must get the man from behind, pinion his arms, drag him, if need be, into the water and drown him.

Softly he crept after the skulker. There was little sound except the occasional cracking of a twig, and Jordan, making similar sounds, did not seem to notice them. The two crept on, the first almost at the water's edge, the second almost near enough to grasp the crawling legs in front. Jane's voice rose just opposite, singing a Spanish song. Sherwin stretched out his hand and almost got the ankle nearest him; then, suddenly, Jordan faced about and saw him, uttered an oath and plunged into the water, swimming straight for the girl on the opposite side. In an instant, Sherwin divined his plan—he meant to get Jane and dictate his own terms to Jim! He knew that Sherwin could not shoot and endanger the girl. But Sherwin broke through a tangle of vines, plunged into the creek and swam after him. Still, the other man had the advantage. As Sherwin struck the water, Jordan leaped out on the other side and was after the girl.

Jane did not run. She faced her pursuer and tried to fight him off, but Jordan's arms were around her and he had lifted her from the ground when Sherwin came up out of the stream, dripping. Knowing that, while he carried the girl, he was safe from gunfire, Jordan started to run to cover, but, burdened, he was not quick enough. Sherwin leaped forward and, throwing his powerful arms around him, dragged him back. Caught by an iron grip above each elbow, Jordan released Jane and tried to turn on his assailant. There was a moment of wild conflict; the two men struggled, twisted and went down together. Sherwin had no time to draw a weapon and he meant that Jordan should not have a better chance. Wrestling and panting they rolled over, slipping down the bank toward the creek, while Jane tried to help Sherwin, and cried for help.

Sherwin twisted and strained at the other man, when they came to a cleft in the bank, fell through it violently and struck water, Jordan uppermost. The force of the contact, the sudden rush of water over his head, loosened Sherwin's grip, and his antagonist drew a knife and struck once, furiously. The blade drove into the other man's arm, and there was a moment more of fierce conflict, the water growing red; then Jordan broke loose and swam ashore. He had crossed the creek. Sherwin still heard Jane's cries and, wounded in the arm, he struck out for the shore and, reaching it, climbed to the top of the bank dizzily. He saw that the girl was there alone and, faint from loss of blood, sank to his knees beside her.

"Oh, you're hurt, you're bleeding!" Jane was down beside him, trying, with shaking hands, to find the wound and stanch it.

Sherwin, looking up into her face, read something there that went to his head.

"It's only a scratch," he whispered hoarsely. "Thank God I was near enough to help!"

But you're bleeding, he's shot you in the arm!" She was trying to bind it with her handkerchief. "And it was for me—Oh, I thought he'd kill you!"

Sherwin laid his hand over hers. "Would you care?" he asked, and his voice shook.

The girl lifted brave eyes to his, the color ran up to her dusky hair, but her look answered his.

"Jane!" he cried, "Jane!"

She did not speak, but her clear eyes misted. In the madness of that moment he cast his last resolution to the wind.

"I love you!" he said softly. "No matter what comes—no matter what is said of me—I love you!"

The girl looked back at him with her sweet gravity. "I don't even know your real name!" she said gently.

He groaned. It all came back to him and turned the world black. "I'm mad," he said bitterly. "You'll hate me soon for this!"

"John!"

He turned and saw her white face lifted, her blue eyes steady and brave.

"Tell me the truth," she said, "tell me—I'll believe you!"

He covered his own eyes with his shaking hands. Then he drew a long breath. He would tell her, he'd tell her all!

There came suddenly a shout and the sound of men rushing toward them.

"It's Jim," Jane said, "and old Mac—looking for me."

Sherwin realized all it meant! He had made love to the girl—she had not definitely repulsed him, her eyes had spoken much, and he was—! The hot blood ran out of his face, his look was haggard. He stood still, trying to hide the blood on his sleeve. It made no difference now; nothing mattered, whether he lived or died. Then he heard her telling them what had happened and how brave he was!

Jim caught at his unwounded arm and wrung his hand.

"To the rescue again! You seem to have taken out a contract for pulling this family out of scrapes, old chap, and—" Jim choked a little, looking at his sister—"I don't know how to thank you!"

"Unfortunately, I always seem to let that rogue slip through my fingers!" Sherwin said. He knew that Jim must wonder how he got there, but Jane broke in with her cry about his arm.

"Jim, he's been shot—stabbed, I mean. You must see to his arm; I couldn't stop the blood!"

"Of course we'll see to it, Sis! Which way did Jordan run. Hazlett?"

"Into the brush," he pointed; "he got me in the arm first and—" he stopped, clapping his hand over the wound which stung painfully now.

"Oh, you must get that arm fixed up!" Jane said to her brother. "Where's the sheriff? He's needed here!"

Sherwin gave her a quick look, something grim in his smile, but Jim answered readily.

"I'd started Hazlett for the sheriff—by the way, where's your horse?" he asked suddenly.

"Over there—" old Mac pointed across the stream—"I see it cropin' grass. Kinder wonder Jordan didn't swipe it."

Both men stared across at one of the fastest horses in the stables—who should have been half way to Hemmings' place by now—quietly nibbling grass on the west road. A look passed between the two but Sherwin missed it. Jane was insisting on his return to the house.

Soil Fumigation Has Been Proven Sound

Machine Application Successfully Tested

By W. J. Dryden
WNU Farm Editor

While fumigation of the soil for the control of soil-borne plant pests has been undertaken during the past 20 years, it is only recently that the practice becomes of commercial importance. With the development of hand and drawn machines, it is now possible to fumigate the cold frame, hot bed or greenhouse soils as well as the garden or farm tract.

There are several types of fumigant on the market such as Dowfume G, which is a mixture of methyl bromide and chlorinated hydrocarbons. It is highly toxic to nematodes (ellworms) and soil insects. The rapidity of action has also been improved. It will kill most nematodes in four hours of exposure and permit the successful seed planting in two days and most plants within four days.

Application is made at staggered injection points to depths of 5 inches. The surface is sealed by thoroughly soaking with water. Outdoor fumigation is practical wherever there is sufficient water available for soaking the surface after application.

In many parts of the country, infestation of the soils by the root-knot nematodes is so extensive that many garden crops cannot be produced on otherwise desirable lands. This system of soil fumigation will permit the successful operation of such land.

Improved Machinery Farm Welder

A new electric welder suitable for rural power lines has just been released by the Lincoln Electric company, Cleveland, Ohio.

It has a maximum input current of 35 amperes and provides a machine which meets the new NEMA standards for this type of welder. Under modern farming, practical electric welding has become a must.

By the use of burlap (B), this device will keep the cold out of the hog house. The burlap is fastened at the top to the door frame and at the bottom (A) to a 2 by 4. The 2 by 4 is fastened to nothing but the burlap.

DDT-Soybean Flour

Spray Reduces Loss

DDT mixed with soy bean flour and sprayed on apple trees at intervals which will not prove dangerous to bees, has proven an effective means of reducing spraying costs and eliminating serious pests.

Four treatments with the DDT-soy bean flour mixture are usually required for effective control under general conditions. The spraying must be done prior to the time when the bees start pollinating.

Factors That Determine Veteran's Pension Rate

Closest to the heart of every veteran who wears a wound stripe is adequate medical care. Gen. Omar Bradley, administrator of veterans' affairs, shortly after his appointment, picked as his assistant to have charge of the medical and surgical division of VA, a man who is no stranger to wounded vets.

He is Maj. Gen. Paul R. Hawley, who was chief surgeon of the European theater of war, and as such had under his direction 254,000 medical department men, including 16,000 doctors, 4,500 dentists and 18,000 nurses. Under his administration more than 1,500,000 patients were admitted to army hospitals in the European theater and of this number 340,000 were battle casualties. So General Hawley has had broad experience in caring for our fighting men in time of war and has been chosen to head up the medical branch of VA because of this experience and great success.

Under the expanding hospital program of VA, General Hawley is calling upon the best medical and surgical brains of the nation to take a hand in the great rehabilitation program of disabled veterans. The idea to take veterans' hospitals close to the medical centers of the nation reflects one of General Hawley's plans to decentralize and bring treatment as close to the home towns of the country as possible.

Questions and Answers

Q. Our boy was taken into the army. We are farming 520 acres of land, milking 12 to 20 cows by hand the year round, raising over 350 head of hogs a year. I am physically unfit to do any farm work. This work is all up to two boys 19 and 20, one a 4-F. We must hire a man to replace the boy that is gone. He has set aside $30 of his wages to help pay for this help. Will the government match this, and if so how do we go about getting it?—L. U., Gladbrook, Iowa.

A. Your local selective service board had the responsibility of deciding whether or not your boy was needed more on the farm than in the army. If he had decided he was needed there, he would have been given an agricultural deferment under the selective service law. No, there is no provision for the government to match the $30 per month. If you can prove a hardship case, which is unlikely, the boy could ask for a discharge on that ground. He would have to initiate the case through his commanding officer.

Q. Is the widow of a World War I veteran entitled to a pension if the husband's death is not connected with the war? Do World War I veterans receive pensions? If a disability allowance was discontinued and the case reviewed and refused again what can one do? Is the wife of a World War I veteran entitled to medical care?—Mrs. J. H., Tower, Minn.

A. Yes, the widow of a World War I veteran is entitled to a pension although death is not service connected. Only disabled veterans receive pensions. In case a disability allowance is discontinued and reviewed and refused again, the veteran has the right to appeal to a board of the VA. Wives of World War I veterans are not entitled to medical care.

Q. I have a lot on a main highway. I'd like to put up a business but in order to do this I need around $2,000. Could you send me full instructions on how to go about this matter and just what I must do?—Mr. H. F. S., Selma, Ala.

A. Go to your bank and ask if they will make you a G.I. loan on the proposition. If they consider it a good risk, they will take care of all the details.

Q. When and how is transportation for servicemen's kin available and what are the chances for the wife of a PFC whose husband is stationed in Regensburg, Germany?—Mrs. C. O. B., Chamberlain, S. D.

A. The serviceman must initiate the request with his commanding officer. If the request is granted you will be notified of all details. Only wives are eligible.

Q. I was discharged from the army in January, 1944, because of wounds received when I stepped on a land mine. I had temporary amnesia and head injuries. Have only a 45-degree extension of my left arm. Otherwise am in perfect shape. How do I go about getting back into the army?—M. N., Eugene, Ore.

A. The army has lowered its regulations somewhat upon physical requirements and would suggest you discuss the question with your local recruiting office, or you may contact your draft board.

Lt. William G. Stratton
Seeks Republican Nomination

Twice elected to public office in Illinois by record-breaking pluralities, William G. Stratton of Morris, now a Lieutenant in the Navy and stationed on Okinawa, is seeking the Republican nomination in the April 9 primaries for the office of congressman at large.

Although absent from the primary campaign, Lieut. Stratton is being actively promoted for nomination in April by Richard Yates Rowe of Jacksonville, candidate for state treasurer; Vernon L. Nickell, unopposed for the renomination for state superintendent of public instruction, and a host of friends through the State. Bill as he is known through Illinois, expects retirement from the Navy sometime in early summer under the present point system for overseas veterans.

A son of the late secretary of state, William G. Stratton, "Bill" Stratton first sought public office in 1940 as a candidate for congressman at large. He was nominated and elected to that office by the largest vote ever cast for a Republican from Illinois for either house of congress. Completing his two-year term as congressman, he became a candidate for state treasurer in 1942, and was elected by the largest plurality of any candidate on the Republican ticket that year. Upon the completion of his term as treasurer in January of 1945, Stratton was immediately commissioned by the Navy and a short time later was sent overseas where he has since remained on duty.

Lieut. Stratton was born in Lake County February 26, 1914, and was graduated by the University of Arizona with a degree in political science. Through close association with his father in his early years, he acquired an unusual insight into the many complex problems of state government which served him in good stead during his four years in public office, which followed a business career begun at the age of 20.

While a member of the 77th Congress, Mr. Stratton served on the congressional committees on civil service, flood control and the District of Columbia.

Dark of the Moon
At Blackstone Theatre

Opening at the Blackstone Theatre eight weeks ago with 100 per cent approval from six Chicago critics, "Dark of the Moon" is one of the best entertainments of the year. Whether the theatre-goer is looking for song, story, color, ensemble, humor, dancing or music, all can be found in legend of the South.

"Dark of the Moon" is a North Carolina legend with music by Howard Richardson and William Berney. It is truly remarkable theatre and brings the theatre something as fresh as the air of the Smoky Mountains, where the scenes are laid, and something as racy and authentic as the cawny likker hoisted out of the jug by the Allen family and Preacher Haggler, characters of the play.

Based on one of the many versions of the old folk ballad, "Barbara Allen," the play recounts the brief career as a human of John, the witch boy, who marries Barbara Allen. The racy mountain dialect, the folk songs, the dominant motive of sex, eerie dancing of Witch Girls in Esther Junger's atmospheric choreography, the orgiastic emotions of the revival meeting, the half-sinister, half-tender romance of John and Barbara give "Dark of the Moon" a primal quality.

The cast of thirty is too large to allow mention of all here, but includes Richard Hart as the witch-boy; Carol Stone, youngest daughter of the celebrated Fred Stone, as Barbara; A. Winfield Hoeny, as Preacher Haggler; Marguerite de Anguerra, Peggy Ann Holmes, Frances Goforth, Millicent Coleman, James Lamphier and Agnes Scott Yost. An orchestra of 18 provides the music.

Robert E. Perry's direction and the settings by George Jenkins — which make you believe you are in the Smoky mountains — are an admirable fusion of imagination and solid craftsmanship. "Dark of the Moon" is one of the most dynamic and interesting plays of recent years.

RICHARD ROWE WINDING UP CAMPAIGN

Richard Yates Rowe of Jacksonville, Republican candidate for State Treasurer, is in Chicago this week concluding his campaign for the April 9 primary election, after speaking in all downstate Senatorial districts in behalf of his own candidacy and that of Lieut. William G. Stratton of Morris, former Congressman at Large. Stratton, former Congressman at Large and State Treasurer, is now serving with the Navy on Okinawa.

Mr. Rowe, former secretary of State and now executive secretary of the Illinois Budgetary Commission, addressed more than thirty meetings in the downstate Senatorial districts, and followed with the prediction that "downstate Illinois counties will go Republican this year as never before." "In all of our meetings," the candidate for State Treasurer said, "we found Republican enthusiasm as never before, and I am confident that the Republican State, district and county candidates will win in 1946 by greater margins than in our statewide victories of 1940, 1942 and 1944."

Urging the election this year of every candidate "from the top to the bottom of the ticket," Mr. Rowe said: "I stress this because this year we are laying the groundwork for the state and national elections of 1948, and the only way that the people can rid themselves of excessive taxation, wasteful spending, new deal schemes and disregard of individual rights by the federal government is through the election of every Republican candidate this year and every Republican candidate, including the Republican candidate for President in 1948."

"The new deal is still in operation," he continued. "And despite the end of the war the new deal is promoting new schemes to spend and spend and spend and the Republican minority in Congress can only fight an uphill fight to stop reckless spending and bring about the things which we all know are right."

Dairy Men Should Depend on Good Hay

"While the dairy farmer is in a strong position at the present time with little likelihood of prices dropping in the near future still there is an inevitable time when prices for dairy commodities will go down faster than costs and a great many dairy men will find themselves pinched," states Farm Adviser, C. A. Hughes. "For this reason we wish to call dairy farmers' attention to two or three factors in reducing costs on dairy farms."

"First the unreasonable high prices of dairy cattle are not justified at this time because they will largely be paid off by lower milk prices. Secondly farm labor will probably stay up a little bit longer than dairy prices and the smart dairy man will switch to machinery as rapidly as he possibly can. This switch has been made to a large extent but still there are peak loads as during haying time when farmers need extra help. There is a variety of new haying machinery coming on to the market at the present time which farmers should consider very carefully because once a machine is purchased he has eliminated other means of handling his hay crop on his farm."

"As we see it there are going to be two ways of making hay and which is the better we do not know. One method is to cut the hay and bale loosely after it is half cured and to finish the curing in the field with the bales shocked up with the end that comes out of the baler up. The other is to bale this hay loosely, put it in a mow and dry it with a hay curing system. This is still experimental."

"An entirely different method involves partly curing hay, chopping it in the field and blowing into a mow where it is cured by a ventilating system. Still another method is being tried. Mowing machines are being developed that run hay through rollers crushing the stems allowing the hay to dry in about half the time in the field. All these methods are aimed on getting hay into some kind of shelter or protection soon after it has been cut to preserve the green color and to keep it from being wet by rains. We would estimate that about half the hay harvested has all the way from light to a heavy drenching rain and that the loss in the feeding value of this hay will easily pay for these new types of haying machinery to prevent such occurrences. We are so used to making hay by present methods and losing a large part of the crop that the average dairy man doesn't realize the loss that he has from improperly making his hay."

"Tests at the agricultural experiment station has shown that good green hay is worth many times more in vitamin content and in feed value than hay that has been exposed to too much weather. It has been demonstrated that cows fed good hay alone will produce 85 per cent of a normal milk flow at 65 per cent of the cost. There is a margin of saving in feed cost of about 25 per cent, that in the post war period can easily make the difference between success and failure on a dairy enterprise. Also it has been found that pasture produces the cheapest milk that is made on the farm. The cost of producing milk on pasture is as compared to producing milk with heavy feeding as one to ten. Therefore we recommend the farmers in the postwar period get ready fertilizing their pastures now and planning rotations with field pastures in these rotations. The seeding of Balboa rye in the fall for pasture running up into early spring is a practice that makes for economy."

"To give farmers information on one type of mow hay drier, a barn meeting will be held on the Martin Loefer farm at 1 p. m. March 29. Mr. Loefer lives south on Quintens Road just below Palatine. At 2:30 p. m. we will meet at George Fairweather's farm south on Mundhank just west of Barrington Road. Here you will not only see a hay drier but we will see a mechanical barn cleaner and a demonstration of herd management to control mastitis. These meetings are in charge of the University of Illinois Extension Service and the Northern Illinois Public Service Company."

Finds Mokena Hotel Register of 70 Years Ago

Along in the mid 70's Mokena boasted of a hotel known as "The Pacific Hotel" of which Wesley Kennedy was the proprietor. After quitting the hotel business, Mr. Kennedy was engaged in the meat market business in New Lenox in the 1890's.

Sometime ago while Mrs. George Kennedy of New Lenox was looking thru some of her late husband's papers, she came across a hotel register of the old Pacific Hotel. Altho many pages have been torn out of the book, yet enough remain to make it interesting.

In the days of long ago many traveling salesmen used to call on the business places and merchants in the smaller towns. These salesmen were referred to as "drummers". The hotel register shows names of many strangers who stopped at this hotel. Some of the guests registered were from California, the Dakotas and many other points.

The pages of the register date back to 1875, 1876, 1878, etc. Names of many local people also appear in the register. In some instances the notation "good supper" appears opposite the name of the hotel guest. In the case of a couple they were registered as Mr. So and So and Lady.

The handwriting in the register is of a large scrawley nature. Between each register page a blotter of the same size as the page was bound in. On both sides of this blotter appear the advertisements and business cards of the leading business concerns of Joliet in business at that time. The ads are those of professional men, marble works, breweries, saloons, druggists, etc. At the top of each register page appears the name of the hotel, of its proprietor and an advertisement of the Joliet Republican Steam Publishing House.

Many of the advertisements were printed in German.

Among the local names appearing in the register are those of Charles M. Jones, O. E. McGovney, M. Enders, Jr., Charles Chilson, D. Brummund, Jr., Henry Battenhouse and F. E. Moulton.

Wesley Kennedy, the proprietor of the Pacific Hotel was the father of the late George Kennedy of New Lenox.

Just where this hotel was located in Mokena is not known by the present residents, but perhaps some of the older one might remember.

Traveling Libraries Enrich Rural Community Life

HOW traveling libraries are bringing education and recreation to farm folks living in rural areas surrounding small towns is described in an article in nationally circulated Capper's Farmer.

Typical of the development of these mobile libraries is the experience of Nebraska. Five years ago an active county library didn't exist in the state. Now there are three—in Adams, Grant and Phelps counties. And in other states rural library service is also expanding.

Five years ago an active county library didn't exist in the state, according to Mrs. Alfred L. Anderson. Now there are three—in Adams, Grant and Phelps counties. And in other states rural library service is expanding.

In 1940, Phelps county got a bookmobile. The city library board and the librarian in Holdrege, the county seat, were co-operative, the Capper's Farmer article points out. Subsequently the joint Holdrege Carnegie-Phelps County Library was formed with headquarters in the city library building.

The bookmobile is a complete library built on a truck chassis. It serves more than half the county's population. It holds about 1,000 books and makes stops every two weeks at 39 stations.

Teachers find better teaching methods are possible with the library. Farm youths have more chance to wisely chosen books for the joy of it. Many adults use the library too.

Examples of how the rural traveling libraries operate in other states are cited by the magazine.

Old Pieces Beautify New Settings

ATTRACTIVE touches for your home may be dust-catching in the attic. A decorative solution for a problem corner or room may be buried in the storeroom.

That's the advice to housewives seeking to brighten home interiors given by the Rural Home editor of nationally circulated Capper's Farmer. So look over the family white elephant collection, she urges. Keep in mind changes are possible with a hammer, saw and paintbrush.

Bring the blue-and-white willow ware or patterned plates down from the top cupboard shelf. Arranged like those in the picture below they will draw admiring glances to the mantel. Five plates might be hung on a large bare-looking wall. There are brackets for hanging them. If you're lucky enough to own tured above. Mrs. L. A. White of Clay county, Iowa, painted the laths ivory. These match the simple draperies and plywood valance she made. Colorful glass and china pieces were brought out of hiding and put on the shelves. Sunlight shining through the array of colored glass makes this window a pretty sight.

Kitchen Efficiency

The ease with which you work in your kitchen depends a lot on cupboard and shelf arrangement, declares the Rural Home Editor of nationally-circulated Capper's Farmer, whose advice on household matters is read by 1,250,000 farm families. Just moving an isolated cabinet next to others can give a longer, continuous working counter. And it may put working centers in a better order with food storage, preparation and service centers next to each other. Rearrangement of cupboard shelves can save you from endless shuffling about of small and large articles.

Peanut Pie Has High Taste Appeal

For a sweet, crunchy dessert that is delightfully different, try Peanut Pie, advises Marjorie Griffin, Rural Home editor of Capper's Farmer. The nutty flavor from chopped peanuts has high taste appeal, she writes in the nationally circulated farm magazine.

Just before serving the pie, top it lavishly with whipped cream. Arrange it around the edge of the dark filling in a ring of snowy peaks.

PEANUT PIE

2 tsp. flour
1/4 C. sugar
1/2 tsp. salt
1/4 C. cold water
1 C. dark corn sirup
Combine flour, sugar and salt; add water and corn sirup and blend well. Boil gently for 3 to 5 minutes. Then slowly pour mixture into slightly beaten eggs, stirring continuously. Add shortening. Spread chopped peanuts over bottom of 9-inch pie shell. Pour filling into crust. Bake in hot oven (425° F.) for 10 minutes; reduce heat to 350° F. and continue baking 35 minutes. When silver knife inserted in center of filling comes out clean, pie is done. Before serving, top with whipped cream. Serves 6.

Pinwheel Biscuits Will Brighten Table

Homemakers looking for something new to brighten the breakfast table will find biscuits in pinwheels just the thing, writes Marjorie Griffin, Rural Home editor of nationally circulated Capper's Farmer.

Flavorsome topping combines raisins, corn sirup and cloves, she points out in the magazine read by 1,250,000 farm families. Just divide dough into eight pieces and shape into strips. Rolling and cutting aren't necessary.

RAISIN PINWHEELS

2 C. flour
3 tsp. baking powder
1/2 tsp. salt
1/4 C. shortening
3/4 to 1 C. milk
1/2 C. seedless raisins
2 tsp. corn sirup
1/2 tsp. cloves
Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Cut in shortening. Add enough of the milk to make a soft dough. Divide dough into 7 or 8 pieces; shape each piece into a strip. Coil strips into pinwheels and place them in a greased pan. Mix together raisins, corn sirup and cloves. Sprinkle mixture on biscuits, pressing raisins into dough. Bake biscuits in hot oven (425° F.) 15 to 20 minutes. Makes 7 or 8 large biscuits.

"Flying Farm Machines" Prove Valuable

A plane requires shelter but it need not be exclusive as one Oklahoman demonstrated by combining hangar and machinery storage.

AIR-MINDED farmers already are putting planes to work and consider them part of their farm equipment, an article in nationally-circulated Capper's Farmer points out.

"Light aircraft are no longer considered as exclusive playthings of rich pilots," the magazine declares. "Farmers from the wide open spaces build T-hangars or park the planes in the barns and use level pasture, alfalfa or wheat fields for landing strips."

"These farmers hop nonchalantly into their planes and put them to dozens of uses, including seeding crops, spreading insecticides, counting cattle, checking fence, carrying farm produce, getting implement repairs in a hurry and doing many other jobs. The cost of operation varies between 2 and 6 dollars an hour."

Active in helping air-minded farmers organize into state associations, the magazine read by 1,250,000 farm families points out that the flying farmers of Oklahoma already have formed the National Flying Farmers Association to promote the greater use of aircraft in agricultural production. Capper's Farmer is urging farmers using airplanes in other states to organize and affiliate with the national organization, whose headquarters are at Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical College, Stillwater, Oklahoma.

Proof of growing interest in flying among farmers is indicated by the fact that while only 12 planes were flown to the first Flying Farmers Meet at Stillwater, Oklahoma, in 1944, a total of 130 farm-owned aircraft were there for the 1945 gathering. Some 222 farm men and women pilots attended.

He believes that education is the daily process of adding to one's knowledge and utilizing that knowledge in a practical sound, useful manner. His constant aim is to make certain that the finest possible educational opportunities and facilities be had by every girl and boy and adult of Illinois.

How would you CHART YOUR COURSE?

Pictured here are the records of four "life lines" of our business—four things which largely control the destiny of any business, whether it be a farm, a factory or a store. They are Wages, Materials Costs, Prices, and Profits. Suppose these were pictures of what is going on in your own affairs. How would you chart your future course from these facts?

What about wages?

Wages have risen steadily for five years. Before the strike which began on January 21 in ten of our plants and which has choked off nearly all farm machinery production, earnings of employees of these plants averaged $1.15½ an hour, not including any overtime. The Union demanded a 34 cents per hour increase and a Government board has now recommended a general increase of 18 cents an hour, which would make average earnings $1.83½ an hour. Weekly average would be $53.40.

What about materials?

No one seems to know how high materials costs will go. The Government has increased steel prices as much as $12.00 a ton, with an average increase for all grades of 8.2%. Steel is the most important material we buy, but prices on other materials are also increasing.

What about prices?

There has been no general increase in our prices since they were frozen by the Government in early 1942. Since then a few small increases have been allowed where particular machines were substantially changed in design.

What about profits?

Risk is part of the American profit and loss system, so we do not, of course, ask either our customers or the Government to guarantee that we can be certain of profits each year. The chart tells the story of our profits during the war. Although Harvester produced more goods than ever before, it had no desire to get rich out of war, so our rate of profit has steadily gone down. What our 1946 profit will be is extremely uncertain.

What is the next step?

As you can see, our present situation is that with frozen prices and declining profits, we are asked to pay higher materials costs and to make the biggest wage increase in the history of the Company. Can we do this?

Wages and materials consume all but a few cents of every dollar we take in. If our prices continue frozen, and cost of wages and materials continues to rise, obviously our Company will begin to operate at a loss at some point.

The exact point at which operating at a loss would start is a matter of judgment. Government agencies and union leaders may have opinions as to where that point is. But if they turn out to be wrong, they can shrug their shoulders and say: "Well, it wasn't my responsibility. I didn't make the decision."

The management of this Company cannot and will not say that. It dares not gamble. It has to be sure. Continuation of our service to millions of customers, the future jobs of thousands of employees, and the safety of the investments of 39,000 stockholders depend on our making as correct a decision as is humanly possible.

What about future prices on farm machinery?

The judgment of Harvester's management now is that we cannot safely make the huge wage increase recommended by the Government until the Government authorizes adequate increases in the prices of farm machinery to cover the resulting increased costs.

That is not a judgment that makes us happy. The Company does not want to raise prices. We prefer to lower prices, when possible, and we know our customers prefer to have us do that. We have produced at 1942 prices, and hoped we could continue to do so. We have delayed seeking general price relief in the hope that it could be avoided. Now we are convinced that it cannot be avoided any longer. The price question must be settled. Until it is settled we do not see how we can settle the wage question. Until the wage question is settled we do not see how we can resume production and begin turning out the farm machines which we know our farmer customers need.

Because of the important stake which both farmers and city dwellers have in this controversy, we are bringing these matters to your attention. Through the cross currents of today's conditions, we are trying to chart a course that is fair to our employees, to our farmer customers, and to our stockholders.

AIR JOBS FOR GALS. At a Women Flyers of America meeting, Helen Olson Director of Women's Travel for United Airlines talked on the wide future of aviation and the jobs it offers women now. Helen said that the airline business is romantic—and for specially qualified persons in some fields there is no limit to advancement.

Applicants must meet stiff requirements. All types of office jobs are available at present. Salaries at United for such occupations begin at $104 to $137.50 a month. Four hundred and fifty stewardesses are needed by June of this year, age 21-26 not over 130 lbs., 5'2" to 5'7" one year college plus one year business experience or registered nurse. Start $125 a month, in six months $140, maximum $170. Required to fly 85 to 110 hours per month. Public contact jobs, passenger agents—ticket agent jobs starting at $140 a month are all now going to vets first. In the future women will again be considered. (To this writer, the wages seem surprisingly low.)

place on earth will be more than 60 hours away; 99 and 9-10th of schedules will operate on time. Weather will be a thing of the past because of radar and electronic devices soon to be installed. Flying, with few exceptions is the cheapest first class way to travel—plus being most convenient, fastest, and cleanest. United has flown one billion 700 miles without a fatality.

IDEA?—What do you pilots think of all meeting together centrally to discuss a "united voice of Chicago aviation." In other words, if any legislation or issue involving flyers come up there would be a strong organization to cope with it for the good of all. This combined group could meet at critical times—and perhaps about four times a year to provide a big audience making it worth while for the best speakers to appear. But let's hear what you have to say on the subject.

CHECK POINTS—The AAF is developing a Helicopter for lifting tanks, bulldozers, gun carriers across rivers and other obstructions. Thursday, March 14th the C. A. A. licensed the first helicopter. That means these ships are airworthy for the public. At last we can look for shuttle service between downtown business districts and airports: Weather broadcasts by the C. A. A. Airways Communications stations have been increased to two each hour.

TAKE THE WIFE AND KIDS—Something new and near by is the Grand River Airpark being constructed on the fairgrounds at Grand Rapids, Michigan. A recreation center and drive-in theatre will be features. Also planned are a roller skating rink, a restaurant, stores, an 18 bedroom hotel, clubrooms, a riding stable and picnic grounds.

"ROGER!" WINGS FAST! Marc A. Law of Northbrook, Illinois took his first flight Jan. 10th and had his private License in FOUR WEEKS.

WELCOME BACK to Instructor Roy Cleveland and John Wasney. Roy is back at Rubikam airport having just completed an instrument flight course at Meacham Field, Texas. Public Service Co., Reports Large Increase In Industries

A total of 82 new industries—by far the largest number in a generation of record keeping—located during 1945 in northern Illinois communities served by the Public Service company of Northern Illinois has been disclosed by the territorial information department of the utility.

Direct employment resulting from the new industries will approximate 9,000 persons who will receive annual wages totalling about $20,000,000, according to the department's report.

"The unprecedented industrial activity which gained momentum throughout 1945 is still on the increase," the report said, "with decisions already made by 24 industries to locate in the area this year."

The department also reported that negotiations are now in progress with 250 more industrial prospects who are considering locating either new or branch plants in the area because of transportation, market, and distribution advantages.

Of the 82 industries locating in the area last year, 27 were newly organized firms, 19 were branch plants of going concerns, many of national importance and 36 were established industries which moved their operations to northern Illinois from other areas.

The new firms will utilize nearly 3,000,000 square feet of floor space to make hundreds of products ranging from candy to castings, and from forgings to fertilizer. About 55 per cent of the space has been leased or purchased in existing buildings, while the remaining 45 per cent is new construction.

In addition, existing industries in the area expanded their manufacturing facilities by over 2,000,000 square feet at a cost of nearly $29,000,000. Important additional employment will be provided by these expansions, the report said.

Attorney J. C. Cowing Campaigning for the Office of County Judge

Attorney John C. Cowing, candidate for the Republican nomination for County Judge of Will County in the April Primary, is carrying on a vigorous campaign in all parts of the County.

Mr. Cowing is the son of the late County Judge, George J. Cowing and Stella Tittsworth Cowing. The Cowing family were early settlers in West Peotone where Mr. Cowing's father was born and raised. Following in the footsteps of his father, Mr. Cowing about ten years ago opened a branch office in Peotone, where he is now associated with Frank J. Hinrichs.

Mr. Cowing, after his graduation from the University of Michigan and his admittance to practice law in 1923, formed a law partnership with his brother the late Glen L. Cowing, which continued until his brother's death in 1944.

For the past twenty three years Mr. Cowing has had an extensive law practice in both State and Federal Courts, and for the past twelve years, as attorney for the Joliet City Schools and other school districts, has had much experience in juvenile delinquency one of the most important branches of the County Court.

Mr. Cowing has always been active in church, veteran, civic, and Fraternal affairs. He is a member of the Richards Street Methodist Church of Joliet. He has served as Judge Advocate of Harwood Post of the American Legion, Master of Matteson Lodge A. F. and A. M., Prelate of the Loyal Order of Moose, President of the Will County Bar Association, and also has served on many civic committees.

Mr. Cowing is married, and resides with his wife and daughter in Joliet. The experience, background, and character of Mr. Cowing make him well qualified for the office of County Judge.

NEW PLAN

REDUCES CONSTRUCTION CHARGES FOR RURAL TELEPHONE LINES

Here's good news for rural residents! A new plan, lowering construction charges for telephone lines, is now in effect throughout our territory in Illinois.

Main Benefits to Rural Subscribers:

1. Where no pole line is now available along public highways, the telephone company will construct a line for ¾ of a mile without charge. It will continue the line free of charge whenever such extension results in an average of one customer for each ¾ of a mile of pole line. In the past, ½ mile of such construction was furnished. This new change will enable many people to obtain service at little or no cost for pole line construction.
2. For the relatively few customers who may still pay some charge for highway construction, the plan provides that the amount may be paid in monthly instalments. Whenever additional customers are connected in an area where construction charges are being applied, the charge will be refigured resulting, in many instances, in reductions of the monthly charges for the customers involved.

3. Poles on private property to carry service from highway to the rural customers' premises have in the past been set and maintained at the customers' expense. Under the new plan, the telephone company will furnish, without construction charges, the number of poles necessary to provide 500 feet of entrance wires and will maintain all pole lines on private property.

This new plan represents another step in your telephone company's $3,000,000 program to provide more and better telephone service for people in rural areas. For further details, consult your local telephone company business office.

Many women in Tinley Park have recently become eligible to membership in the American Legion Auxiliary and many more will become eligible as soon as the veterans in their families join the American Legion said Mrs. Mager, membership chairman of Tinley Park Unit, in explaining the new eligibility rules to the Unit's membership workers.

Four classifications of women now eligible are:

1. Mothers, wives, sisters and daughters of members of The American Legion.

2. Mothers, wives, sisters and daughters of persons who lost their lives in either World War I or World War II.

3. Mothers, wives, sisters and daughters of veterans of either war who have died since honorable discharge from war service.

4. Women who themselves were enrolled in the armed forces in either war.

Women of families with men still in the service are eligible if the service man has joined The American Legion. Mrs. Mager explained. All members of the armed forces became eligible to the Legion upon the surrender of Japan and many have enrolled, or their families have sent them a gift membership, in advance of their return home. If the service man has not yet become a Legion member, the women of his family are not yet eligible to the Auxiliary.

The same condition applies to the mothers, wives, sisters and daughters of returned veterans. They become eligible to the Auxiliary when the veteran joins the Legion, but not before.

They Like It! That's Why Farmers Stay on the Farm

KUTZTOWN, PA.—It was men's night at the Kutztown grange, and each man was asked by Mrs. Howard Baldwin, lecturer, why he became a farmer. There were 17 responses, with 16 men replying that they were born on a farm, liked it, and intended to stay.

Some of the replies, as recorded in the Kutztown Patriot, follow:

"I was raised on a farm," said Henry Rabenold. "I had 10 years in the city, but was glad to get back to the farm."

"You are your own boss," Ray Kulp pointed out. "You're independent, and the farm is the ideal place to raise children. Personally, I like livestock, especially the old cows."

"At the end of a year you have something to show for your work—straw, hay, grain, your cattle," added Thomas Merkel. "I like to see things grow. To the farmer, farming means more than any other occupation can mean to anyone else."

"I like the outdoor life," volunteered William Schulz, who spent 30 years in manufacturing. "It means your own roof, plenty of food, and time to look around, watch the sky and the clouds."

"I was away from it for seven years," said George Schaeffer, "but had to get out in the open, so started it again."

And so it was with all the rest, from the soldier just discharged to the youth still waiting his draft call. As Clarence Johnson put it:

"The farm is the best place, for it gives you the chance to make something out of it, not only for yourself but for other people."

SEA CALF... More arrived than started. This picture, taken at Antwerp, Belgium, shows a calf born while its mother was crossing the Atlantic ocean. Sportsmen Plant Trees to Provide Shelter for Game PERKASIE, PA. — Perkasio Sportsmen's organization has authorized Lester Frederick, head of the forestry committee, to purchase 6,000 transplants for the club's reforestation program. The agricultural class of Sell-Park high school, under the direction of D. Ker Endsley, will assist in the planting.

In 1938 the club began its reforestation program with an allotment of 3,000 trees, and a similar number were planted each year except in 1944. The planting of 6,000 this year will balance the annual program.

CANON CITY, COLO. — When a weed burner strapped on his back exploded, setting his clothes on fire, Frank Day, 60 years old, ran two blocks to a watering trough and jumped in to extinguish the flames.

'Soft' Basket for Potatoes

A rubber-covered potato basket to safeguard potatoes against bruising has been developed. The basket, made of steel wire coated with rubber, holds five-eighths of a bushel and is for use in field harvesting.

Manure Loader Used to Move Wyoming Snow

LUSK, WYO. — The new mechanical manure loader, designed to save back-breaking work for farmers and ranchers, was put to a new use by the town of Lusk recently when snow drifts filled the streets.

Councilman Joe Kuhn, also a farm machinery dealer, brought out the mechanical manure loader and set it to work loading snow into trucks to be hauled away. The snow was removed in one-fourth the time ordinarily required.

State Wishes It Had Bought Land From Ute Indians

DENVER, COLO. — Rangely oil field, in northwestern Colorado, is the most sensational oil find in years but the state of Colorado isn't happy about it. The Indians had the last laugh after all.

"When Colorado became a state, the Ute Indian tribe was given title by the federal government to a large section of land in western Colorado, including most of what today is the Rangely field," State Land Commissioner William Milliken explains.

"The federal government gave to the state sections 16 and 36 of each township in the state. But when it came to the Ute lands, it became necessary for the state to put up $1.25 an acre.

"The state officials objected and bargained for other sections. As a result, the state was granted additional land in Rio Blanco, Garfield and Mesa counties. That's why we own so much land in those counties and none in the Rangely field.

"If the state owned the usual sections in Rangely, our school finance problems would be solved for years to come."

Moreover, another question has come up: Who owns the land underlying the bed of the White river? There are 170 acres of land, potentially worth millions of dollars, to be considered. Oil men and state officials would like to know who owns it.

Black Setter Pulls Master from Creek

DAWSON, GA. — A black setter named Smoky is credited by his master, T. J. Donovan, with saving his life when the car in which they were riding plunged into a rain-swollen stream near Macon.

They were returning from a hunting trip when the accident occurred. Smoky, riding on the back seat, grabbed Donovan by the neck and swam with him to the bank of the stream. The dog was still on guard over his master and tried to fight off state patrolmen when they approached.

Examined at an animal hospital, the setter was found unharmed and later had a joyous reunion with his master.

GROUNDING... Two golden eagles, believed to be slayers of calves and squirrels, were caught in a coyote trap by ranchers living near Paso Robles, Calif. Sandy Sumner, owner of the Diamond D ranch, has offered the pair to the city or county, if the officials feel they want to give a couple of eagles a good home.

101 YEARS OLD

Starting on his second hundred years is Elias Brownfield, now living in Glendale, Calif. He still plays his accordion, and after looking back over more than a century he says he has only one thing to regret, that he electrified against Abraham Lincoln. He has no prescription for longevity.

"I never smoked or took liquor," he admits, "but I don't think that had anything to do with it."

ST. PETERSBURG, FLA. — Variety is supposed to be the spice of life, but so are arguments in a baseball training camp. The argument this time, including members of the Cardinals and the Yankees, had something to do with brains on and off the ball field.

"Why is it?" one Cardinal wanted to know, "that a fellow can be smart in many ways, but dumb when he gets into football or baseball? Or why he can be pretty dumb until he gets into some athletic competition, when he may be smarter than almost anybody?"

This is a fair question. Does anyone recall the most intelligent member of the old Giant team from 1908 through 1913? I can give you his name. He is better known as Bonehead Merkle — the Giant who forgot to touch second base in 1908. Yet Fred Merkle was the best educated member of the Giant squad. But his reflexes on the ball field failed to operate as quickly as some others who would have been baffled by McGuffey's second reader. Fred had to take time to think things out. You can't do that when split second co-ordination or intuition must rule.

For example, Rube Waddell was a mental eccentric. But there were few smarter, once the gangling Rube reached the mound with a baseball in his left hand.

There were two famous ball players who, as far as I know, never made a mental mistake on the field. One was Babe Ruth who came along from an industrial school. The other was Nap Lajoie who was lifted from a cab driver's seat in Woonsocket, R. I., and a trifle later was surrounded and captured by Uncle Egbert Barrow.

Neither needed any college degree to be smart on a ball field. They were born that way.

Instinct and Intuition

The athlete who is naturally smart in competition must have a high degree of instinct, intuition and concentration. I know Eddie Arcaro figures it that way in racing.

"You haven't time to think in a split second," he told me once. "There's an opening or there isn't an opening, and you have to make up your mind in a flash. Which means largely instinct for the right things to do."

Ty Cobb had this natural instinct, this ability to concentrate, but Cobb also worked on these natural gifts.

"I used to lay in bed at night for hours thinking up plays," he said once. "I planned some of these plays weeks ahead against certain teams."

Old time ball players had no motor cars, movies, night clubs or other distractions to kill time. So many of them thought only about baseball. I mean such men as King Mike Kelly, Kid Nichols, John Montgomery Ward, Charlie Comiskey, Hughey Jennings, Clark Griffith, John McGraw and most of the old Orioles.

The main mental asset in any game is concentration. Many have this needed ingredient more than others. But the art or knack of concentration can also be developed. Concentration means keeping your mind on the job from start to finish.

As Knute Rockne used to tell his squad—"Keep physically relaxed — but mentally alert."

Borowy's Predictions

We caught Hank Borowy on the fly just as he was heading for the Cub camp and Catalina island.

"How about Cub prospects?" we queried.

"We'll need all the pitching we can get this season," the Cub star said. "By that I mean most of the other clubs will be stronger where we will have about the same cast. We got little back from the service. The Cardinals, Giants and Dodgers will all be stronger. So will the Pirates, Braves and Phillies."

"We'll be pitching to better hitting strength all along the line, while at the plate we face improved pitching also. That means tough going. A flock of dangerous hitters have been added to the league since last fall."

"Hitting in the two leagues? I can't see much difference. I had a better record in the National than I had in the American. But my arm was in much better shape when I joined the Cubs."

I asked Borowy how the National league race looked from his angle.

"The Cardinals are the team to beat," he said, "with so much strength at every point. But they can be beaten. I'm sure we'll be up there. The Giants have all the power any team needs at bat, but their pitching is still uncertain. What pitcher can Mel Ott depend on for as many as 18 games?"

"The Dodgers will be better and they were tough enough at times last season. The Pirates will be improved and the Braves will probably be bothering everybody."

Innocent Bystander

The Cinemagicians: Paved with guffaws, "Road to Utopia" has Bing and Bob performing their whacko-batics. . . . "Sunbonnet Sue" packs the nostalgic charm of a family album—playing a heartfelt of Gus Edwards' lilt. . . . "Open City" (which was produced in Italy) is a slam bang-up tribute to the intrepid Italian Undergrounders. . . . "The Sailor Takes a Wife" is a fluffy little romantic fable with Robert Walker and June Allyson whipping up the froth. . . . "Six Gun Man" is a stenciled plot, repetitious as hiccup. . . . Advance reports say that "Journey Together," an importation from Britain by Terrence Rattigan, will be a big click. . . . "Phantom Express" co-stars a yawn and a snore.

The Radio: The newest man-wife combo on the air is Mr. and Mrs. Earl Wilson of Akron, Ohio, and these parts. Via Station WLIB once weekly. . . . Billy Halop's emoting on CBS' "Aftermath" is a welcome addition. He recently returned from the wars. . . . "Duffy's Tavern" is cooked up by only 11 gag-writers. . . . "Dead End" was loaded with earthy lingo. But the roughest word in the Theatre Guild's version on the networks was "jerk."

Bigtown Newsreel: Honorable John Coffee of the House of Representatives week-ending from the Capitol at the Pierre. . . . Anita Colby, the model's model. . . . Ann Sothern, the star, paying an unexpected visit to the 52nd street joynets and delighting the proprietors of same. . . . Don DeFore (the orchestra leader in the film, "Stork Club") in town to rehearse with "Judy O'Connor," which opens in Apr. . . . Claudette Colbert, whose husband is a specialist on hay-fever and allergies, but she suffers and suffers and suffers all year 'round. . . . Martha Raye carrying her beautiful baby from the St. Moritz to a waiting cab and the choo-choo to Chi.

Sallies in Our Alley: Jackie Green, the Embassy Club clown, was in a Broadway restaurant and asked a waiter the price of dinner. "We have two dinners—one for $2 and another for $5," was the reply. . . . "What do I get extra on the $5 dinner?" asked Green. . . . "Prestige," was the snapper. . . . Harvey Stone says Sinatra has muscles now — from carrying all that money to all those banks. . . . Latin Quarter boss Lou Walters asked an actor if he knew what an atheist was. . . . "Sure," was the retort, "someone who don't believe in Looney B. Mayer!"

Novellette: When Harry Tugend (who wrote the film "Wake Up and Live") was an unknown writer, he courted Jean Barkow. . . . At the time she was Billy Rose's Girl Friday. . . . "Why do you go around with a nobody?" Rose asked her. "Hook up with a success or some guy likely to be one!" . . . Jean disregarded the counsel and married Tugend. . . . They've been living (happily ever after) in Movietown, where Tugend is now Paramount Studio's executive producer. . . . He will soon produce Paramount's film, "The Life of Billy Rose."

Three months ago the U. S. Army in Germany discovered the lists of Nazi sympathizers in the U. S. A. Army officials promised the lists would be made public. The State Dept. promised the lists would be made public. A Cong. Committee promised the lists would be made public. . . . And what happened? Absolutely nothing! After all those promises — the lists are still a secret. And even the reason the lists are being hushed up—is a secret.

Quotation Marksmanship: K. Roos: Shall we split a kiss? . . . Anon: Rudeness is the reply we cannot think of. . . . J. M. Barrie: I am not young enough to know everything. . . . Virginia Faulkner: The decoration was not so much period as exclamation point. . . . Stefan Zweig: The lark whirled upward like a skyrocket of delight. . . . Chris Morley: The extraordinary insect obligato of Summer nights. . . . H. V. Morton: Conversation as formal as a minuett. . . . C. E. Coe: As naked as a peeled banana. . . . O. W. Holmes: Sin has many tools, but a lie is a handle which fits them all. . . . Sax Rohmer: A smile 30 years her junior. . . . Heywood Brown: The ability to make love frivolously is the chief characteristic which distinguishes the human beings from the beasts. . . . Gelett Burgess: A secret as fascinating as a loose tooth.

Times Square Ticker: Observers report Sec'y of State Byrnes waited (unrecognized) in the Waldorf barber shop until Frank Costello wised up the manager and got him priority. . . . Van Johnson will dine at a 52nd Street spot which barred him five years ago when he was merely an autograph collector. . . . G. B. Shaw told Gabriel Pascal that Irv Hoffman's caricature of him is the best of thousands he has seen. . . . Ned Sparks reports that he would like to get back to Movietown and do a picture.

Kidneys Must Work Well—

For You To Feel Well
24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at night, swelling.

Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.
